NEWS RELEASE

United States Attorney Pat Meehan today announced the filing of a superseding indictment¹ charging six individuals, including a car salesman and a bank teller, with conspiracy, bank fraud, aggravated identity theft, and use of a computer in connection with bank fraud.

According to the supeseding indictment, from March 2007 through May 2007, the defendants stole names, social security numbers, addresses, dates of birth and driver's license numbers of customers of Citizens Bank and Commerce Bank and then used fraudulent identification to cash counterfeit checks and make forged withdrawals from the bank accounts of those customers.

Defendant Damoon Hosseinzadeh worked as a salesman for New Concept Inc., a car dealership located at Norristown, Pennsylvania, where he had access to information of the dealership's customers, including names, social security numbers, driver's license numbers, dates of birth, and bank account information. Defendant Clarissa Gavin worked as a teller for Citizens Bank at a branch located at Wayne, Pennsylvania, and also had access customer information.

Defendants Victor O'Connor, Rashin Owens and David Tunnell purchased information from Gavin and Hosseinzadeh, which was then used to manufacture false photographic identifications in the names of customers of the banks using the picture of Tunnell and Tommy Antone Murray on the identifications. Tunnell and Murray acted as "check-runners," individuals who posed as customers of the banks and cashed or attempted to cash fraudulent checks made payable to those customers or withdrew or attempted to withdraw money from those customers' accounts, totaling in excess of $86,000.00.

¹An Indictment or Information is an accusation. A defendant is presumed innocent unless and until proven guilty.
